Message from Ohio APWA President, Dr. Sonja Simpson

Happy Spring! The late snows in April have made many of us envious of our friends in warmer climates. Public Service agencies have seen a higher utilization of winter resources, such as salt, than we have had in a couple of years. Whether you are a snow & ice equipment vendor or a road superintendent, you are affected by the winter weather and what it means to fiscal year budgets. APWA is a great source of information for both public and private sector members. The 2018 North American Snow Conference (NASC) in Indianapolis is a one-stop-shop to meet with vendors and peers, learning about the best and greatest use of materials and equipment. Technical sessions cover everything under the sun, with an eye to the 4 parts of the winter formula: PEOPLE + EQUIPMENT + MATERIALS + WEATHER FORECASTING. The 2018 NASC has expert-led snow and ice education sessions and an exhibit floor full of vendors who want to share the latest in winter maintenance solutions. Indiana is but a short drive away, so consider sending your staff to the NASC in May – you will be glad that you did.

I'll see you there!

Sincerely, Sonja Simpson, DBA

Workshop Re-caps

The Southwest Branch is hosting a variety of workshops this year. Here is a summary of some of them.

Active Shooter Safety Training.

No one should ever think “It can’t happen here” because we have seen it happen anywhere; at businesses, schools, churches, restaurants, and concerts. We learned from Utah Bailey, Butler County Safety Director, the current strategy in the event of an active shooter is Run-Hide-Fight. An Active Shooter incident is a situation unlike any ever experienced and an individual must take direct responsibility for personal safety and security. A Survival Mindset will provide protection through Awareness, Preparation, and Rehearsal. Awareness requires observing surroundings, any possible dangers, and noting the two nearest exits in any facility visited. Preparation includes looking at the environment through the lens of survival: what could be done to barricade or secure this space, what could be used for defense. Survivors are prepared both mentally and emotionally to do whatever it takes to survive. Rehearsal requires mentally or physically practicing the plan. This reduces response time and builds confidence.

Any action taken, or not taken, during an active-shooter incident may involve life-threatening risk. Figure out how to survive: will you get out (Run)? Is there a path to escape? Will you hide out? Can you get to a place where the shooter might not find you? Or is your only option to take out (Fight) the shooter? Law enforcement will respond as soon as they can and the more information provided during the 911 call, the better. Above all, stay as calm as possible. To better prepare, your agency may want to conduct mock active shooter training exercises with assistance from the local law enforcement, EMA, Fire, or EMS. These people are the experts and train continually. To download materials regarding active shooters, visit www.dhs.gov/activeshooter

Excavation & Trench Safety Training

When people leave for work, they expect to return home. To ensure that goal, Patricia Falls from Firstline Safety Management presented a one-day course to share the best practices for Excavation and Trench Safety. She stressed there are no shortcuts for safety. Every safety training session should focus on recognizing what the hazard is and how to mitigate it. There is a new confined space standard which applies to both horizontal and vertical spaces. If you plan to call 911 for rescue, you must check ahead that the rescuers who will respond are properly trained AND available. If not, you must be trained and practiced in techniques for self-rescue. She reminded the attendees that trench boxes are not shoring systems; trench boxes provide a safe work space. They must be inspected for damage and must be properly installed within the OEM’s specifications. Different soil types will present different levels of hazard. Always be watching for water in the soil or cracks opening in the soil, and place spoils safely away from the edge of the trench.

Many of the materials commonly used in construction are hazardous if inhaled or absorbed through the skin. To avoid silica dust, when sawing pavement or masonry block, use a wet cut. And to remove bitumen, it is safer to use lard to clean your hands than gasoline. If you are the inspector on a job site, be sure you understand the limits of your authority. But safety is everyone’s business and if you see something, say something. Document any concerns you share with the contractor. Remember it is always Safety First because none of us want an injury or fatality. We don’t want to leave a void in any family’s life.

The Ohio Ethics Law: Can I Do That?

Susan Willeke, with Ohio Ethics Commission, explained that the Ohio Ethics Law is particularly aimed at public officials and employees. As tax payers, we all expect and trust our government to treat us fairly, and that all decisions will be made objectively in the public interest. So although it’s not illegal to have a conflict of interest, it is illegal to act on it. For gifts, they must not be substantial and improper. Ohio does not define “substantial” as a specific amount, but agencies might. A cup of coffee or small promotional items are nominal and acceptable. A flat screen tv won as a door prize at a conference belongs to who paid for admission, which is often the employer. Public employees are paid with public funds, and they should never use time and resources for private benefit. No private use of a backhoe for ditch digging, no use of the public address or email as the contact information for a private sideline business. Or to benefit your family or business associates. Ms. Willeke’s office is always ready to answer your questions and provide guidance. There is even an online e-course available at <http://www.ethics.ohio.gov/>.

Be aware of chapter email scams, phishing, and more

APWA members should be aware of email scams, phishing attempts and other efforts to commit fraud using a chapter's email account or website.

Over the recent months, the American Public Works Association has been attacked at both the chapter level and national level as what appears to be a trusted business associate on the National/Chapter/Branch level asking for release of funds, reviewing of invoices, etc. APWA is a prime target for these individuals due to the nature of our business and the word "American" in our name. The surge in these types of email communication has warranted this warning.

Members should please proceed with caution regarding these types of emails. Take a moment to re-read the email and ask if it looks funny. Look to see if the email addresses match (most the time they will, apart from a period or missing a letter). Ask if this email is asking me to do something I would normally not do and then take a moment and call the sender of the email to confirm the transaction prior to releasing of funds.

Please take the above actions before opening, clicking on reply or reply all or even forwarding the email. Those are the actions the individual wants you to take. If all else fails, feel free to contact APWA's Senior Compliance Manager, Justina Cox, at jcox@apwa.net or 816.595.5279, for assistance.

City of Montgomery Recognized

The City of Montgomery received the APWA 2017 Excellence in Snow & Ice Control Award in Des Moines, Iowa. The award recognized the city's ongoing efforts to provide "snow and ice control on roadways and public property as an essential municipal service necessary for public safety, daily mobility, services and other economic transactions and the elimination of delays for emergency vehicles, the motoring public and pedestrians at public facilities." The department strives to deliver quality services that are sound financially with quality customer service.
